A GOVERNESS WANTED.

'Our governess left us, dear brother,
Last night in a strange fit of pique,
Will you kindly seek out another?
We want her at latest next week;
But I'll give you a few plain credentials,
The bargain with speed to complete;
Take a pen—just set down the essentials,
And begin at the top of the sheet!

'With easy and modest decision,
She ever must move, act and speak;
She must understand French with precision,
Italian, and Latin, and Greek;
She must play the piano divinely,
Excel on the harp and lute,
Do all sorts of needlework finely,
And make feather-flowers and wax-fruit.

'She must answer all queries directly,
And all sciences well understand,
Paint in oils, sketch from nature correctly
And write German text and short-hand;
She must sing with power, science and sweetness,
Yet for concerts must not sigh at all,
She must dance with etherial fleetness,
Yet never must go to a ball.

'She must not have needy relations;
Her dress must be tasteful yet plain;
Her discourse must abound in quotations,
Her memory all dates must retain;
She must point out each author's chief beauties,
She must manage dull natures with skill,
Her pleasures must lie in her duties,
She must never be nervous or ill.

'If she writes essays, odes, themes, and sonnets,
Yet be not pedantic or pert,
If she wear not traviatas, but bonnets,
If she deem it high treason to flirt,
If to mildness she add sense and spirit,
Engage her at once without fear,
I love to reward modest merit,
And I give—two hundred a year!'

'I accept, my good sister, your mission,
To-morrow my search I'll begin;
In all circles, in every condition,
I'll strive such a treasure to win;
And if, after years of probation,
My eyes on the wonder should rest,
I'll engage her without hesitation—
But not on the terms you suggest.

'Of a bride I have ne'er made selection;
For my bachelor thoughts would still dwell
On an object so near to perfection,
That I blushed half my fancies to tell;
Now this list that you kindly have granted
I'll quote and refer to through life,
But just blot out—'A Governess Wanted,'
And head it with—'Wanted a Wife!'

GOING TO THE SEASIDE

A CHARMING LOVE STORY.

For the last two summers I have gone to the seaport of——. It is not a watering-place, nor is it fashionable. It is too pretty a place for that—fashion never having an eye for the picturesque. It is a quiet old style town, with considerable wealth among its residents, and boasts of a Gothic church and two or three decidedly stylish residences.

I like to go there, because there is such a calm, peaceful air about the place; because the streets are so shaded and clean; because the people are so intelligent and agreeable; because the boating is so good, and the roads so fine, because——

The fact is, I am not telling the truth. It is not any of these things at all. The real reason is, as the sagacious reader knew at the beginning, a woman—a bright and beautiful creature—a modest violet—a harebell—a blue forget-me-not—a charming, delicate woodland blossom, flourishing in the shade of this obscure town, and sweetening all the air with her fresh young presence.

It is two years ago since I first saw the town of——. A passion for new places and quiet places, for by-ways and side roads, had seized upon me. I therefore set out on a hunt, and one Saturday evening, just at the set of the sun, an old-fashioned stage coach set me down at a shaded, sleepy-looking inn in the town of——. It certainly had a charming look in the yellow rays of the setting sun, and I resolved, forthwith, to remain there over Sunday.

Fortunate resolve! I shall never cease to bless the day which brought me to this town.

The next day was Sunday. It proved cold, blustering, raw and unsummery.—This at first put me out of temper, but it proved, as the reader will see, the most fortunate thing in the world.

I went to church, and created a sensation. Nobody knew me, and strangers were, of all things, strange to the town.—Besides, as I flattered myself at the time, my metropolitan air excited attention, and, I secretly believed, a little admiration. I have experienced a great many sensations in my life, and am enabled to say with confidence that the consciousness of admiration, especially from the fair sex—the knowledge that you are peeped at over fans, glanced at from behind pocket-handkerchief, whispered about behind open prayer-books—is, of all sensations, the most delightful and agreeable a man of my temperament can experience.

If any one is accusing me at this moment of vanity, I shall not repel the charge. I do not say I am very vain—indeed, I am quite used to the charge; but I do most positively assert that upon this particular Sunday, and in this particular church, I three several times caught the brightest pair of blue eyes fixed attentively upon me—which blue eyes being caught in the act, withdrew their gaze in the greatest confusion—and if this is vanity, why make the most of it.

After church I of course lingered to get a look at the pretty girls, and pretty girls in a pretty town are the rule and not the exception. There were plenty in this town, of that peculiarly delicate lily style of beauty, half a dozen of whom would make the reputation of any town.

I stood watching the assemblage as they slowly emerged from the church. The wind was high. Veils were tossed hither and thither; mantillas and shawls fluttered in the wind; roses came to fair cheeks; stray curls floated ravishingly about white necks, pretty boots peeped out, and hoops were a little unmanageable.

The congregation had nearly passed out without the appearance, much to my surprise, of the blue eyes which I had caught stealing glances at me. Disappointed, I turned to leave, when suddenly an exquisitely sweet voice uttered an exclamation close to my shoulder. I turned abruptly, and found myself within three feet of a glorious beauty, looking plump into the very eyes I was seeking for. She suppressed a smile when she saw me; but she couldn't conceal the two smiling dimples in her cheeks, and she began to intently busy herself with a refractory parasol, which the wind had nearly turned inside out—the cause of the exclamation that had aroused me. But all her efforts could not restore the parasol to propriety; another gust of wind completely reversed it, and another whisked it out of her hand, and carried it rushing along the green.

'Permit me,' I exclaimed, with breathless eagerness, and without waiting to finish the sentence, I rushed rapidly after the fugitive parasol. It was a pretty chase.—I followed it from the churchyard into a garden; over a fence, in which I caught my coat tail, into a cabbage bed—through the cabbage bed into a potato field—across the potato field full headway into a hedge of blackberry bushes—through the blackberry bushes, until at last I clasped it, lodged between two elder bushes.

I bore it back, a proud trophy. The owner stood near to the spot where I had left her; but such a look of latent mischief lurked in her eyes, such an ill-concealed laugh lay folded up in those ripe and ruddy lips, such a demure, low-toned thanks, and such a blush!

It was so very careless of her, and she thanked me so much. Whereupon I interrupted her by declaring that I was delighted with the trouble and, looking into her eyes, wished only it had been some real service to deserve the rich reward I had received. And then, with a bow and a blush, she tripped off lightly and rapidly; but as I stood watching her, I thought I could see her frame shake as if with laughter.

I walked home to the inn on air. I was never so buoyantly happy in my life before. I could not retain my delight at the adventure. I began to plan the most glorious results as sure to follow; I made up my mind to fall in love with her at once; I fancied myself an accepted suitor; I speculated upon the marriage suit. I grew excited upon the subject, and, with flushed cheek, went stalking down the road with all my might. I walked faster: it began to grow doubtful if I was walking at all; it soon grew certain that I was not walking—in fact, my elation became so uncontrollable that, before I knew it, I was running at a ridiculously furious rate—upon which discovery I stopped short, and came to my senses.

I determined to find out her name—to find out where she lived—to lay siege to her acquaintance, and then, of course, the rest would be easy enough. Her little heart would flutter and struggle at first, of course; but in a little time it would fall, fascinated and helpless, into—stop! That is an awkward kind of simile I have got into. It has a snakish suggestiveness; but let me make hasten to supply the missing word—fall helpless into my arms—and not jaws, as some mendacious reader has been tempted to suggest.

I soon found out her name and 'local habitation'—for, angel as she was, she was blessed with both of those mundane luxuries—but the acquaintance? ah! that was not so easy of accomplishment.

Her name proved to be Mary Cole; and an exquisite cottage on the outskirts of the town, and near a noble old forest, I soon discovered to be the little casket which held the jewel that I coveted.

How I hung about that cottage! How I surveyed it from afar, and how I stole up to it under cover of its shrubbery, and peered in at its window—catching glimpses of passing figures which I was always ready to declare could be only Mary's.

And then I met her, too, in the streets, on the green, at church—and then the delight of lifting my hat to her—of catching the downcast look, the rising blush, the quick smile, the sharp, hitting, piercing glance, that fairly impaled me through and through, and took my breath away!—why all these were raptures only to be experienced in a love-chase.

At last we met to speak. It was away from the town, in a forest road, hidden among leafy trees—a quiet, narrow road, with damp, overgrown turf, dimly shaded with old trees and thick undergrowth up to its very borders—the very spot to render a meeting romantic and delightful.

She was riding, and I came upon her around a turn so suddenly that her horse shyed, and in the confusion of meeting me she dropped her whip.

Blessed opportunity! In an instant I secured it, and, with hat in hand, bowing and returning it.

The horse was restive, and, startled a little by my proximity, backed into the brushwood. I caught his bridle and led him back to the road, quieting him by a few pats and soothing words.

'Why, Charley, Charley,' said his rider, stroking his arched neck; 'don't be afraid, Charley!'

'Charley!' exclaimed I, laughing; 'is it possible? My namesake——'

'Oh, sir!' exclaimed she, reddening to the very roots of her hair, 'I didn't—it was quite—'

'Accidental, of course,' said I. 'But, believe me, I never was so proud of a namesake before.'

Still blushing, and with her eyes bent upon the ground, she tapped the horse lightly, and would have rode on, but I was determined not to let the encounter end so fruitlessly.

'Will you pardon me?' said I, with an easy movement, getting before her in the road; 'will you pardon me if I ask in what direction this road will lead me?'

'It enters upon the highway, sir, about a mile beyond.'

'And as charming as this all the way?'

'I think it very beautiful, sir.'

'I am very ignorant of all your localities,' said I, 'for I am a stranger, and only accidentally wandered into this exquisite retreat about an hour ago—and—I beg your pardon, but I am sure you must ride and walk here very often, it is so surpassingly lovely.'

'It is my favorite ride, sir. But, pardon me, will you permit me to ride on?'

I stepped back, and lifting my hat deferentially, remained uncovered until she had passed by and was out of sight.

I did not, like Ferdinand, in that remarkable love story of D'Israeli's, rush forward and kiss the sod upon which her horse had stood, but I have no doubt that I indulged in antics equally extravagant—and let me say that a lover without extravagance must be an absolute icicle, a bit of Arctic frigidity, congealed from the tips of his fingers to the core of his heart.

From that moment my time was either spent in this secluded path, or in hovering about the cottage. I met her a number of times, but never with an opportunity to more than utter a passing salutation. But still I felt that my cause was prospering; for I detected that in her manner which no ordinary sensation at meeting a stranger would have caused. She took too much pains to avoid me; was always when I approached too much absorbed in a flower or a book; and altogether was at too much pains to keep her bonnet drawn, to be acting with simple unconsciousness.

And I thereupon grew more demonstrative. I left flowers every morning upon her doorstep, and saw them sometimes worn in her bosom. I watched her once gathering and admiring some mosses.—The next day I left at the cottage a most beautiful collection, (which had cost me full three hours' labor,) prettily garnished with some shells from the beach.

I ventured from flowers to fruit, and every day some ragged urchin, picked up on the road at the cost of a penny, would steal up to the cottage and leave on the doorstep a splendid cluster of grapes, or a moss-set basket of fruit.

We were now fairly into September, and I went out frequently after partridges, and such game as the surrounding country afforded. I was not a zealous or devoted sportsman, and I came back as often with my bag empty as full. Indeed, I used the sport mainly as cover for my advances upon more delectable game; for no matter how often I might meet the beautiful Mary, a gun upon my arm was always an excuse for my presence, and served frequently as a means for a few chance words of conversation.

But one day I wandered a mile or two from the town, and in an opposite direction to the wooded path where my rambling steps usually led me. I was after birds in eager earnest upon the occasion, for I had determined to send the following morning to the doorstep of my Mary's cottage as fine a brace of partridges as I could shoot.

At an unexpected moment, while intently peering after my game, voices broke upon my ear from behind a copse close by—and one of them I knew instantly as Mary's. The other was a youthful voice, but unmistakably masculine. The hot blood flew to my face, and I felt a quick pang shoot through my heart—a jealous pang, if ever jealousy there were.

Of course it was absurd. I had as much right to be jealous of Mary Cole as I had of the French Empress; but, as I listened and heard that unknown voice address her in words of endearment—heard expressions of affection fall even from her lips—I felt the jealousy rising hot and furious, and great black waves of passion flooded heart and brain. In an outburst of rage at an expression from Mary's lips, I ground my heel into the earth, shook my fists in the air, and furiously seizing my gun, turned to withdraw. But the gun, I know not how, caught in my dress by the lock. In an instant a violent explosion stunned and shook my frame—a hot blast was blown in my face—a sharp, ringing pain shot through my shoulder—a horrible dizziness and faintness came over me—earth and sky mingled together—then darkness and oblivion followed.

I could not have remained insensible long. I awoke with a sharp intense pain in my right shoulder, and a numbness extending all down my arm. The first dawn of consciousness was accompanied by a vague perception of some one hovering over me—of a bright face between mine and the sky—of an arm extended under and supporting my head.

'Thank Heaven,' said a voice of suppressed joy.

'Thank Heaven!' muttered I, incoherently, drawing my hand over my brow, 'for what?'

The arm appeared to be carefully withdrawn and my head was allowed to sink gently back upon the sod.

'Are you better, sir?' said a sweet voice, 'I hope your wound is not dangerous; but you are faint—if they would but come!'

I lay still, and drank in with delicious pleasure these words—for they fell from the lips of Mary Cole. Faint, dizzy, and bewildered with pain as I was, never before did I experience such a thrill of joy as this knowledge afforded me—the knowledge that I lay there wounded, and Mary Cole tending and supporting me—staunching my flowing blood—uttering words of sympathy and sorrow. I almost forgot—forgot the outbreak of jealous rage which had so nearly proved my death; and seized by a sudden impulse, attempted to struggle to my feet, with some wild, vague intention of falling upon my knees before her. But she caught my arm, and pressed me back.

'You must not rise, sir—indeed you must not. You have started the blood afresh already. Lie perfectly quiet, I beseech you—help will arrive presently.'

But I caught her hand, her white, tender hand, stained, as it thrilled me to see, with my blood, and [illegible] round before me. I was startled by the deathly palor of her face, and the wild [illegible] her eyes; but even as I looked a warm [illegible] came mantling over brow and [illegible]

'What has happe[illegible]

'You are wounde[illegible] an accident. My brother has run fo[illegible]—'

'Your brother—speak [illegible]—your brother?'

She started and shrank back a little.

'Forgive me,' said I, thrilled with a new pleasure at the discovery that it was a brother to whom she had addressed those words of affection. 'Forgive me, I called you Mary because——' A sudden faintness seized me, and I could not continue.

'Oh, Heaven!' exclaimed she, lifting up my head in her arms, and looking around wildly, 'will they never come?'

'It is nothing,' I succeed in uttering. 'I am better now. Let me rise. I think I might walk, with a little aid.'

'I wish you could, sir,' said she; 'for my father's cottage is only half a mile from this.'

'Let me try,' said I; and, aided by Mary, I made the attempt. Leaning upon her shoulder, (inexpressible felicity!) I succeeded in gaining my feet.

'Could you walk, sir?' said she—'I think I could support you a little.'

We walked on a few steps, but I was very weak, and she trembled a little. I soon found the exertion too much for me; but Mary led me a few steps further to a tree, and aided me to a seat, where I could lean against the trunk.

'Sit near,' said I.

She looked at me with surprise. I continued 'I know you, do I not?' And then I noticed that she wore in her bosom a little bunch of my flowers. She instinctively moved her hand towards them.

'Why,' said I, still faint, and speaking brokenly, 'are we such slaves to the formalities of the world? I am sure that you might sit there on the turf near me, for I know you very well—and see, the bandage on my wound has slipped. Won't you replace it?'

'No, sir,' she replied.

'No?' I repeated, and I stared with surprise.

'Because I do not think it has slipped in the least,' said she.

'Let me convince you.' And I tore it off. It was her own handkerchief. The blood gushed out freely.

'What have you done?' exclaimed she, quickly and imperatively, as seizing the handkerchief and falling upon her knees at my side, she began to readjust it.

'You are near where I like to have you. Do not turn away. My name is Stafford—yours—oh, I know it well enough—is Mary Cole. I am a gentleman, but a stranger here—in fact, a prisoner here.'

'A prisoner?' she asked.

'Love is the jail, and Beauty the jailer,' I replied.

'Your arm is right now,' she said, abruptly rising, and withdrawing half a dozen feet.

'But I am very faint,' I said.

'There is a spring close by. I will bring some water.'

'How?'

'In the hollow of my hand.'

'Bring it,' said I; and she ran off to do so, and returned in a moment with a little water in her hand, dripping through her fingers.

'Put it on my brow,' said I.

'I will sprinkle it upon your face if you are faint.'

'No: my brow is hot. Bathe it, I entreat you.'

She hesitated a minute; then came up and laid her hand, with its cool contents, upon my brow.

'That is pleasant,' I said. 'Are they coming?'

'Yes, I see them now,' she replied.

'It was your brother, then, who—but I didn't know you had a brother.'

'He is at home from college, sir.'

I now heard steps running, and a bright, handsome youth came panting up, incoherently expressing his delight that I was still alive. Then the surgeon came, who felt my bones, and found them unbroken.

'Only a flesh wound,' said he—'very weak from loss of blood, that's all; slight inflammation—no danger; must be well nursed, though.'

Then a consultation in low tones took place, after which the youth came towards me and begged to know if I would go to his father's cottage until I was convalescent—and I, grown rapidly dizzy and ill, nodded a consent, whereupon Harry, for so Mary called him, ran off to procure a litter to convey me, and the surgeon brought out his instruments and proceeded to the extraction of the bullet, and the dressing of the wound.

A semi-unconsciousness accompanied and followed all this; but a pale, agitated, sweet face would at moments suddenly flash upon my senses, and I had a dreaming consciousness of tender hands lifting my head, and gentle fingers pressing upon my brow.

Fever and light-headedness lasted for some hours; but these ailments passed away, and found me domiciled in Mr. Cole's cottage, with Mary for a nurse, and Love for a physician.

I got well too fast. I was soon walking about with my arm in a sling, and quite capable of going anywhere—in fact, disarmed of every excuse for remaining Mr. Cole's guest. But how think of tearing myself away from the most blissful existence I had ever known! Mary's society had become a necessity to me. When she was present, sunshine rested everywhere; when she was gone, a cloud darkened the world.

I felt, too, great hope of winning her. I was certainly not indifferent to her. I could detect a thousand things that made that evident, and who knew but that down in her heart there smothered the flame which one word from me would make an open blaze?

We walked together, and, with Henry as a third, rode and sailed together; but still as nurse and patient, (for I held to the bandages and the privileges of illness with persistent tenacity.) The mock antagonism, the sympathy hidden and yet revealed under abrupt words—the confidence sallying out and retreating by whimsical turns—the contest of wit and will—what was all this but skirmishing on the brink of that great flowery depth which we call Love?

'Mary,' said I one day to her, 'my arm is painful; the wound should be dressed.'

'Psha! I dressed it only an hour ago.'

'Then you did it badly,' said I.

'Why should I try it again, then?' she asked.

'Because it was carelessness,' I replied, 'not ignorance.'

'But your arm, I suspect, is as well as mine,' said she. 'You are cheating me.'

'That's a vile charge. But come and see how badly the work was done.'

She comes, and says, 'It is perfect. Dr. Elton could not do it better.'

My well arm steals around her waist. She starts. I hold her tightly. She looks down into my face, and then suddenly away; but my arm rests there unresisted.

'I have never told you, Mary, how I came to be wounded, nor the cause.'

'The cause!' said she. 'Wasn't it an accident?'

'No,' I replied; 'jealousy.'

'Jealousy!' A slight movement, as if to escape.

'And of you,' said I.

'Of me?' A quick, sharp glance backward: an effort to escape; then downlooking eyes, a blush, but calm and still.

'Shall I tell you the story?' I asked. A low, soft, husky 'Yes.' I tell it with my other hand wandering up, resting upon her neck, and playing with a curl. When I cease perfect silence ensues.

'What do you say to it, Mary?'

'You were punished for bad passions.'

'But mean jealousy went hand in hand with noble love.'

A bound, then, but I caught her with both my arms. Oh, the ecstacy of 'Yes,' when it breathes accepted love!

'Halloo! By Jupiter!'

We stand in confusion and blushes before Master Harry.

'What the dickens is this?' said he.

'Hush!' said I, going over to him, and seizing his hand. 'She's mine, Harry; she loves——'

Harry cut me short by a tremendous whistle. Then he threw his cap up to the ceiling. Then he shouted hurrah! with all his might, and running up to his sister, caught her blushing face in his two hands, and kissed her cheeks a dozen times. And then——.

I shall not recount all his extravagances, nor my own.

From that day I made regular visits to——, and continued them until one day in August last, when they ceased. But that was my wedding-day.

CAUGHT ON THE JURY.

The following, which we have heard told as a fact some time ago, may be beneficial to some gentleman who has a young unsuspecting wife:

A certain man, who lived about ten miles from K——, was in the habit of going to town about once a week and getting on a regular spree, and would not return until he had time to "cool off," which was generally two or three days. His wife was ignorant of the cause of his staying out so long, and suffered greatly from anxiety about his welfare. When he would return, of course his confiding wife would inquire what had been the matter with him, and the invariable reply was, 'that he was caught on the jury and couldn't get off.'

Having gathered his corn and placed it in a large heap, he, according to the custom, determined to call in his neighbors and have a real corn shucking frolic. So he gave Ned, a faithful servant, a jug and an order to go to town and get a gallon of whiskey, a very necessary article on such occasions. Ned mounted a mule and was soon in town, and, equipped with the whisky, remounted to set out for home, all buoyant with the prospect of fun at 'shucking.'

When he had proceeded a hundred yards from town he concluded to try the 'stuff,' and, not satisfied with once, he kept trying until the world turned around so fast that he turned off the mule, and then he went to sleep and the mule to grazing. It was now nearly night, and when Ned awoke it was just before the break of day, and so dark that he was unable to make any start towards home until light. As soon as his bewilderment had subsided so that he could get the 'point,' he started with an empty jug, the whiskey having run out, and afoot, for the mule had gone home. Of course he was contemplating the application of a 'two year old hickory' as he went on at the rate of two-forty.

Ned reached home about breakfast time, and 'fetched up' at the back door with a decidedly guilty countenance.

'Where in the thunder have you been at, you black rascal,' said his master.

Ned, knowing his master's excuse to his wife when he had got on a spree, determined to tell the truth if he died for it, and said:

'Well, master, to tell the truth, I was kotch on the jury and couldn't get off.'—Nashville News.

A VIRGINIA TRAVELER AND A KENTUCKY LANDLORD.—A traveler from Virginia, as his blooded horse, pletporic saddle bags, and haughty insouciance indicated, stopped at a comfortable wayside inn, in Kentucky one night, many years ago. The landlord was a jovial, wholesouled fellow, as landlords were in those days, and gave the stranger the best entertainments his table and bar would afford, as well as his own merry company to make him glad. Early in the morning the stranger was up and looking around, when he espied a rich bed of mint in the garden. He straightway found Boniface, and indignant at what he supposed his inhospitality in setting plain whiskey before him, when the means of brewing nectar was so easy of access, he dragged him forth to the spot, and pointing his finger at the mint, he exclaimed:

'I say, landlord, will you be good enough to say what that is?'

'A bed of mint,' said the somewhat astonished landlord.

'And will you please tell me what is the use of it?'

'Well, don't exactly know, 'cept the old woman dries it sometimes with the other 'yarbs.'

The Virginian almost turned pale at the enormity of the assertion.

'And do you mean to tell me that you don't know what a mint julep is?'

'Not 'cept it's something like sage tea, stranger.'

'Sage tea! Go right along to the house, get a bucket of ice, loaf sugar and your best liquor.'

The landlord obeyed, and the stranger soon made his appearance with a handful of the fragrant, dewy mint, and then they brewed and drank again. Breakfast was over, and the stranger's horse was brought out, only to be ordered back again. Thro' the livelong day, they brewed and drank; one or two neighbors dropped in, who were partakers, and late in the night were their orgies kept up. Ere they made it bed time, the landlord and his Virginia friend, who had initiated him into the pleasant mysteries of mint julep, were sworn brothers, and when the latter departed next morning, Boniface exacted a pledge that he should stop on his return, and stay as long as he pleased free of cost.

The stranger's business, however, detained him longer than he expected; and it was the next summer before he came back.

Riding up late in the evening, he gave his horse to an old negro who was at the gate, and at the same time inquired:

'Well, Sam, how is your master?'

'Yonder him come,' said the negro, pointing to a youth who was approaching.

'I mean your old master, fool.'

'Old massa! him done dead dis 'tree month.'

'Dead! what was the matter with him? He was in fine health when I left him.'

'Yes; but see. Massa Stranger, one of dem Virginia gemmens come along here last year and showed him how to eat greens in his licker; he liked it so well he done stuck to it till it kill him,' said the old darkey, shaking his head.

The stranger passed a less jovial night than on his previous visit, and was off by daybreak the next morning. He quieted his conscience, however, in the end, with the reflection that good things are sometimes misused.

WHAT WINES ARE MADE OF.

Hiram Cox, M. D., of Cincinnati, has made the following startling statement:

During the summer of 1856, I analyzed a lot of liquors, [illegible]ome conscientious gentlemen of our own city, who would not permit me to take samples to my office, but insisted on my bringing my chemicals and apparatus to their store that they might see the operations. I accordingly repaired to their store, and analyzed samples of sixteen different lots. Among them were Port wine, Sherry wine, and Madeira wine.—The distilled liquors were some pure and some vile and pernicious imitations; but the wines had not one drop of the juice of the grape! The basis of the Port wine was diluted sulphuric acid, colored with cedar berry juice, with alum sugar and neutral spirits. The base of the Sherry wine was a sort of pale malt, sulphuric acid, from the bitter almond oil, with a percentage of alcoholic spirits from brandy. The basis of the Madeira was a decoction of hops, with sulphuric acid, honey, &c., spirits from Jamaica rum. The same week after analyzing the above and exhibiting the quality and character of the liquors to the proprietors, a sexton of one of our churches informed me that he had purchased a gallon of the above Port wine, to be used in his church on the next Sabbath, for sacramental purposes, and that for this vile mixture of sulphuric acid, alum, and elder berry juice, he paid $2 75 per gallon.

GOOD HUSBANDS SCARCE.

A man may be cheerful and contented in celibacy, but I do not think he can ever be happy; it is an unnatural state, and the best feelings of his nature are never called into action. The risks of marriage are for the greater part on the woman's side; women have so little the power of choice, that it is not perhaps fair to say that they are less likely to choose well than we are; but I am persuaded that they are more frequently deceived in the attachments they form, and their opinions concerning men are less accurate than men's opinions of their sex. Now, if a lady were to reproach me for having said this, I should only reply that it was another mode of saying there are more good wives in this world than there are good husbands, which I verily believe. I know of nothing which a good and sensible man is so certain to find, if he looks for it, as a good wife.—Robert Southey.

TUESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 12, 1858.

THE NORTHERN DEMOCRACY.

It is said, that a man may repeat a falsehood, until he actually believes it himself. Be this so or not, it is not very difficult to be persuaded of the truth of a thing that chimes in with our earnest wishes.

To reject the supposition that the opponents of the Democratic party are engaged in a wilful and deliberate misrepresentation of the position of the Northern Democracy, we can only account for the persistent effort to impeach its integrity and conservatism by one or the other of the causes above mentioned. That there is no truth in the charge which they are so freely circulating is susceptible of easy demonstration, and without going into a long array of facts to substantiate the assertion, we shall briefly refer to the developments of the last twelve months, to prove all we desire.

The unsoundness of our Northern allies is based upon the course of a few refractory democrats who refused to support the Lecompton policy of the administration, and Stephen A. Douglas, as the leader of this faction, and once a prominent member of the Democratic party, is trotted out by way of giving force and effect to the accusation. Now we respectfully submit, that our opponents are debarred from adducing evidence of this character without first acknowledging their own want of fealty to the South, for as a general thing, they were the endorsers and supporters of Douglas and his confederates and the denouncers of the Lecompton constitution. If, then, the Northern democrats are unsound and unreliable because a few of their men refused to support the Kansas constitution, Southern know-nothings are certainly not trustworthy for the same reasons. On the other hand, the charge falls, for it cannot be urged that the men who voted with the South, and advocated the admission of Kansas with her slave constitution are not to be trusted, for the most ultra fire-eater would find himself at a loss for cause of complaint against them. The Southern opposition are cut off from any chance of finding "a true bill," by which to arraign Northern democrats upon a charge of unsoundness, and were they to succeed in so doing, the evidence by which they are to be convicted will be equally powerful in convicting their accusers. The Southern democracy regretted the course of their friends from the non-slaveholding States who opposed the Lecompton constitution, still there are but few who have carried their antagonism beyond the halls of Congress, and the majority, regarding the question as an extinct issue, are boldly fighting Black Republicanism, and actively co-operating with the national Democracy.

Shall we look to the Northern democratic press for evidence in corroboration of the alleged unsoundness of the party? We are willing to be tried upon such testimony, with a perfect confidence in a verdict of acquittal. As a [illegible] the press in the free States in the interest of the Democratic party are as true to the constitution, as true to the rights of the several States, as bold in the avowal of their high-toned conservative opinions, and as active in enforcing them as any man can desire, and the blows which such journals as the Boston Post, New York Journal of Commerce, Day Book, Philadelphia Pennsylvanian, Southern Monitor, New Hampshire Gazette, and others that we might mention, are inflicting upon Black Republicanism may well elicit from the papers of slave States just encomiums of praise and commendation. The Press is but the reflex of popular sentiment, and were there no other testimony to sustain us in our confidence in the soundness and conservatism of the democratic masses of the North, the course of these journals would be all sufficient. But we are not left dependent upon circumstantial testimony to make out our case; we are not forced to rely upon simple inferences and deductions to make good our cause. We are supported in our declarations by the most indisputable evidence, and that in the shape of the vox populi, as proclaimed aloud from congregated thousands, assembled to declare their sovereign will upon the great questions of the day. To these expressions of popular feeling we refer to bear us out in the opinion we entertain of the reliability of our Northern friends, and to refute the calumny of a desperate faction. Whether in primary meeting, district or State convention, the same sound, national, and conservative sentiments are enunciated by the Democracy, and the same determination evinced to sustain the South in her just demands, and to fulfill their obligations to the constitution. In the face of these things, and with a full knowledge of the manly and independent position of Northern democrats, there is a studied and systematic attempt by the opposition to impair the confidence of the South in the Democracy of the North. The effort, like the rest of their philanthropic deeds, will prove an abortion, and the Democratic party will continue to stand high in popular favor as a bulwark to turn back the dark current of abolition aggression.

We close this article by adding a portion of the resolutions adopted by a meeting of the Massachusetts Democracy, as a specimen of the feeling of our Northern friends, and as containing a refutation of the baseless charge that is brought against them:

"4th. And, further, That the election of James Buchanan in the canvass of 1856, as President of the United States, against a candidate of a dangerous sectional party, was evidence not only of the interposition of a Divine Providence, but of the instinctive patriotism and intelligence of the American people. That this election was of a man whose long course of public service, from the private soldier in the ranks to grades upward and highest, until by his patriotism, his integrity, his wisdom, he was by an almost universal call of the Democratic party placed in the still higher position he now with such dignity fills.—And that in reviewing the course of his administration thus far, illustrating as it does a stern, steady, national, and Democratic policy, with a success significant of enlarged statesmanship and patriotism, we cannot refrain the expression of our gratitude to, and increased confidence in, the President, and to again repeat the pledge of fidelity to the Democratic party by the earnest support of his Democratic administration.

5th. That we, following in the footsteps and reverencing the teachings of the fathers of the Democratic church, avow again our religious advocacy of a rigid maintenance of State rights. That the compact upon which this confederacy is founded requires of each State and of each citizen of a State a faithful conformity with every provision of that compact. That it is of bad faith and traitorous in any State, by its legislative or executive action, to embarrass the execution of laws constitutionally established by the general government for the protection of the persons or property of the people of all the States. That we also repudiate and contemn the doctrine that rights admitted, that rights written in the Constitution and affirmed by our highest judicial tribunals, may be nullified by State or territorial legislation, by their refusal to pass laws protective and defensive of all persons and property. That the rights of citizens of Territories, coming from North or South, involving their property of all descriptions, whether of fabrics of New England manufacture or the property in negroes, are sacred. And that any suggestion, emanating from any source, affirming that the constitutional rights of the people of a State or Territory can be, by 'lawful means,' obliterated, or withheld by non action on the part of the law-making power, is based upon a looseness of political morals, a faithlessness to constitutional obligations repulsive to the sense of the Democracy of the Union."

THE BEAUFORT JOURNAL

Has been discontinued, as we learn from an extra issued from the office on Monday last, 4th inst. The cause of the temporary suspension of the Journal is that the Editor, John Nichols, Esq., has accepted a situation at a point which renders his connection with the paper at Beaufort impossible. We suppose that Mr. N. would not have accepted this situation had he been sustained in his efforts to permanently establish a paper in Carteret County, and at a point where an enterprise of this character is much needed; but, as is the case with a great many country papers, the Journal is numbered among the things that were, for want of support, and the editor has to seek some other place to earn a living for himself and family.

During Mr. Nichols' editorial career he proved himself competent for the post he occupied; and though he may have erred —for to err is human—he has the consciousness of having done his duty, regardless of consequences. We wish him success in his retirement.

☞ An exchange says the American party of New York, in refusing to unite with Republicanism in that State, has gained for itself high honor and deserved praise.

So it has. We hope there are none to deny to the "American" party the "honor" of a refusal to unite with Black Republicanism. Jack was self-sacrificing in refusing to eat his supper, and all will award him the "honor" which such bitter self-denial merited. The "refusal" of the New York "Americans" to coalesce with their Black Republican friends, is something like the chap who applied to old father Noah for admission into the ark, and having all his appeals disregarded, and ordered to be off with himself, manifested his independence by telling the old fellow to go to h— with his scow, it was not going to be such a devil of a shower after all.

THE PRESS.

We are in receipt of the first number of a handsome penny paper with the above heading, published in Petersburg, Va., by Messrs. S. B. Paul and J. T. Phillips. The Press takes the place of the South-Side Democrat of which Mr. Paul has for some time been the editor and proprietor. NICARAGUAN AFFAIRS.

Some months ago, says the Norfolk (Va.) Herald, President Martinez, forgetting all that the United States Government had done to prevent the success of fillibustering in that country, put forth, with Costa Rica, an appeal to the European Powers for protection against the United States Government, he pretending to believe that the Government at Washington had designs upon the territory of Nicaragua.—This scandalous imputation and falsehood, though perfectly in character with the Nicaraguan Government, was adding insult to injury, and General Cass, it appears, has not let the libel rest without demanding an explanation. It appears that he instructed General Lamar to demand reparation for these unworthy imputations. He calls the attention of the Government of Nicaragua to the fact that it owes its political existence, or rather the power it exercises, to the laws of the United States, as executed by the Government at Washington. The establishment of a political protectorate by the Powers of Europe, over the independent States of this Continent, he says, the Government of the United States has always been avowedly opposed to, and will be resisted by all the means in its power. The Transit routes over the Isthmus are to be open to the world, and American citizens will be protected in travelling across them. The weakness of the Central American Governments will no longer be received as an excuse for violating the rights of American citizens, nor as shielding them from the consequences. Mr. Cass says:—

While the just rights of sovereignty of the States occupying this region should always be respected we shall expect that these rights will be exercised in a spirit befitting the occasion and the wants and circumstances that have arisen. Sovereignty has its duties as well as its rights, and none of these local governments even if administered with more regard to the just demands of other nations than they have been, would be permitted in a spirit of eastern isolation to close these gates of intercourse on the great highways of the world, and justify the act by the pretension that these avenues of trade and travel belong to them, and that they choose to shut them, or, what is almost equivalent, to encumber them with such unjust regulations as would prevent their general use. The United States do not seek either the control or the exclusive use of these routes. They desire that the advantages should be equally common to all nations. Nor do they claim to interfere with the local governments in the determination of the questions connected with the opening of the routes, and with the persons with whom contracts may be made for that purpose.—What they do desire—and mean to accomplish—is that the great interests involved in this subject should not be sacrificed to any unworthy motive, but should be guarded from abuse, and that when contracts are fairly entered into with American citizens they should not be wantonly violated. Other nations will no doubt pursue the same course in relation to their citizens or subjects who may have similar interests"

As well and as strongly put as this is, the following is still better:

The United States believe it to be their duty—and they mean to execute it—to watch over the persons and property of their citizens visiting foreign countries, and to intervene for their protection when such action is justified by existing circumstances and by the laws of nations. Wherever their citizens may go through the habitable globe, when they encounter injustice they may appeal to the government of their country, and the appeal will be examined into, with a view to such action on their behalf as it may be proper to take. It is impossible to define in advance and with precision those cases in which the national power may be exerted for their relief, or to what extent relief shall be afforded. Circumstances as they arise must prescribe the rule of action. In countries where well defined and established laws are in operation, and where their administration is committed to able and independent judges, cases will rarely occur where such intervention will be necessary. But these elements of confidence and security are not everywhere found; and where that is unfortunately the case the United States are called upon to be more vigilant in watching over their citizens, and to interpose efficiently for their protection, when they are subjected to tortuous proceedings by the direct action of the government, or by its indisposition, or inability to discharge its duties." * * * * * *

"This Government, however, yet indulges the hope that a returning sense of justice may induce the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica to recognise their duties, and afford redress for the serious causes of complaint which the United States have urged. But it is proper they should both distinctly understand that the American people and Government have yielded enough to the weakness of those republics, and without doing them injustice, they will now take care and do justice to themselves.

"Preparatory to such action as may be necessary, a naval force will be stationed at San Juan del Norte, and also at San Juan del Sur, and at Realejo, with orders to afford all necessary protection to the persons and property of American citizens; and the commanding officers will be directed to communicate with you, and you will not fail to keep them advised upon all the subjects which may relate to the execution of the duties thus entrusted to them."

The result of the election in this State is a triumph of the Democracy and the vindication of the President's Kansas policy. The democratic majority in the Legislature is twenty-two. The candidates for Congress of the Douglas wing of democracy had no opposition, as the Legislature at its last session passed a law postponing the election one year. The administration democrats, therefore, made no nominations. The Douglas democrats, however, regard their nominations as valid, as federal laws limit the Congressional term to two years.

MR. BUCHANAN'S MESSAGE TO THE QUEEN.

The Milwaukie (Wis.) Sentinel, of Wednesday, says:

Exception having been taken by some members of the Jewish persuasion to one particular paragraph in the telegraphic dispatch sent by President Buchanan to Queen Victoria, Dr. Isidor Kalisch, Rabbi of the Bhe Jeshurun congregation in this city, wrote to the President for an explanation. Yesterday Dr. Kalisch called upon us to read the President's reply, and request its publication in the Sentinel. It is as follows:

'Washington City, Sept. 11, 1858.

'My Dear Sir:—I have received your favor of the 5th inst., and permit me to say that in the construction of my answer to the Queen I think you are somewhat hypercritical. Most certainly I never intended, by using the expression, 'all the nations of Christendom,' to cast any reflection upon the Jews. Such an idea never entered my mind. Both as President of the United States and as an individual I have ever been the advocate of religious liberty and the perfect freedom of conscience. For many of your persuasion I entertain the highest personal regard, and I would be the last man in the world, either in an official document or a private letter, to use an expression derogatory to their character or calculated to wound their feelings.

'Yours, very respectfully,

'JAMES BUCHANAN.

'Rev. Isidor Kalisch, Milwaukie.'

To Business Men.—Every business man and mechanic, who has a proper appreciation of the true mode of doing business, ought to have impressed upon his memory the fact that no man should be delicate about asking for what is properly his due. If he neglects doing so, he is deficient in the spirit of independence which he should observe in all his actions.—Rights are rights, and if not granted, should be demanded. The selfish world is little inclined to give him his own, unless he has the manliness to claim it. The lack of proper fulfillment of this principle has lost to many fortune, fame and reputation. Occasionally a customer, who is less a gentleman than an upstart, puts on haughty airs and affects to be insulted at being dunned for money that he ought to have paid long before. No matter. The laborer is worthy of his hire. We know it is unpleasant to be dunned, and equally unpleasant to dunn other people; nevertheless, circumstances sometimes require that we submit to both; but we would be sorry to get "wrathy" at a man because he asked us for his own, and we think a man very small potatoes who will fly in a passion when we demand a small bill.

THE SLAVER CASE AT BOSTON—THE CAPTAIN HELD FOR TRIAL.

Boston, Sept. 28.—The case of the slaver Echo was resumed this morning.—The first witness was Lieut. Chas. C. Carpenter, who testified that he examined the negroes on board of the Echo, and found branded upon their backs and arms different letters half an inch long. Capt. Maffitt identified the muster roll found upon the captain of the Echo's table, and which contained some dozen names.

Mr. Prince, for the defense, stated that he should not raise the question of jurisdiction before this court, as the commissioner had bound the defendant over to the Circuit Court. A new complaint of misdemeanor, under the fourth section of the act of 1818, was then preferred against Capt. Townsend, in connection with the previous charge. An examination was waived, and the defendant was ordered to produce recognizance on this charge in the sum of five thousand dollars for his appearance at the Circuit Court on the 15th of October.

☞ The credit system is the curse of modern journalism. Appearances about a printing office may indicate great thrift, but behold, after years of toil, the proprietor finds the whole profits of the concern are dissipated in bad debts, of small amounts, scattered from Maine to Mexico. How shall this evil be remedied?

Atlanta Intelligencer.

The remedy is easy—adopt the cash system. Let the journalists adopt the system and the evil will be corrected at once. The only difficulty in the way, is the want of sufficient firmness and independence among the journalists of the day to adopt it. The mass of them have been so long beggars, they cannot screw themselves up to the point to declare their independence. They prefer rather to drag out a beggarly and miserable existence for their papers, themselves and families, than to secure comfort and competence by taking an independent course. Such is journalism, with few exceptions, in Georgia.—Augusta Chronicle.

Eight Democratic newspapers have been started in Indiana within the past few weeks.

DISORGANIZERS.

Benton proved false to the Democracy and the South, and, as a consequence of his defection, he was repudiated by one and scorned and contemned by the other. Van Buren did the same thing, and met the same fate at the hands of his quondam friends. And so of the other traitors to the cause of Democracy. They all have died the death as a penalty for their turpitude. The same fate should be awarded to Douglas—the Democracy can survive his loss, and the country can afford to spare him from the councils of the nation. Perhaps if we had more policy and less candor, or, in other words, if we preferred men to principle, regarding the success of the former as of more importance than the preservation of the latter, we would speak with bated breath of the recusant senator from Illinois. With us men are nothing—principles are everything. The former are the creatures of a day, strut their brief hours upon the stage, and then pass away, and as soon pass from the memory of man, while the latter are the same yesterday, to day and to-morrow, and as lasting as time itself. But, says one, if Douglas is overwhelmed, the knell of the Democratic party in the Northwest is already sounded—it could not withstand his defeat. Away with all such idle assumptions. If the party that has dominated this country for nearly sixty years has become so weak as not to be able to survive the loss of any man in her ranks, no matter how eminent in talents and great in influence, the time has come for it to pass away.

When a party arrives at that point in its career where it cannot bestow the proper punishment upon all traitors to its cause, it is meet that it should quietly seek its grave and cumber the earth no longer with its presence. We hold, however, that the Democratic party has not as yet reached that wretched, contemptible position. It is able to lose the support of all such men as Douglas in Christendom, possessing the will and the power to treat all such traitors as they deserved to be treated.—Policy would dictate that Douglas be let alone, but he can never gain our consent to pursue such a policy at the expense of principle.

As between Douglas and Lincoln we take no part in that contest. If we detest the principles of the one, we abhor and execrate the doctrines of the other. We hope and trust that the Democracy of Illinois will never be reduced to the humiliating alternative of selecting between these two political reprobates. Rich in talent, strong in power, can the Democracy of that State not concentrate upon some honest, reliable man—a man like Judge Breeze for instance, and send him to the Senate in lieu of Douglas. Is Douglas the only Democrat in Illinois that is fit to represent his party in Washington that people shall ask the question. "Is not Douglas a safer man than Lincoln? Is he not the lesser of the two evils?" In the language of a cotemporary, the Democracy of the South has fallen into a fathomless abyss of degradation when it raises an issue whether Stephen A. Douglas is a safer man than Lincoln! The issue is not which is the safer or better man, but which is the worst or most unsound. We cannot decide in a contest where to support the lesser evil would be a monstrous wrong, and therefore hope that Democratic Illinois will support a Democrat and a friend to the Kansas policy of the Administration.

A NEWSPAPER ON A STUMP.

A Correspondent of the Christian Advocate and Journal writes from Oregon Territory an account of a visit to the celebrated Mammoth Tree Grove, in Calveras county:

We reached the grove at 4 P. M. on the 23d, and put up at 'The Mammoth Tree Grove House,' the only public, indeed, the only dwelling-house at the grove. The accommodations were satisfactory. A semi-weekly entitled the "Big Tree Bulletin and Murphy's Advertiser," is edited and printed on the stump of what is called the big tree, though it is not by any means the largest tree in the grove. There are ninety six of those wonderful trees in a circuit of about one mile. These trees do not stand alone, but in a forest of large trees, generally pines and cedars. They are truly wonderful, and, like our great lakes, one must see them fully to appreciate their vast dimensions. Sugar pines, eight feet in diameter, and more than two hundred feet high, standing in the near neighborhood of these wonderful growth, seem mere saplings in the comparison. 'The Father of the Forest' lies in stately grandeur on the ground, having been blown down, nobody knows when, his huge form measuring one hundred and twelve feet in circumference, and by estimate four hundred and fifty feet in length. I say by estimate, for the top is broken off three hundred feet from the root. But as the tree is eight feet in diameter where it is broken, it is reasonably supposed, judging from the general taper, that one hundred and fifty must be added to complete the length. 'The Mother of the Forest' excites commisseration. There she stands, denuded of her back, one hundred and twenty feet from the ground. This was done about four years ago, and yet, so tenacious is she of life, a few green tufts still adorn her head. The framework of the scaffolding is still standing, and the spiral stairway, formed by large pins driven into the tree. We did not ascend this stairway, as the gentlemanly conductor thought the pins might not be reliable.—'The Big Tree' was cut, or rather bored down, some time ago. The leveled stump forms the floor or an arbor, in which, as stated above, is the editor and printing office of the Big Tree Bulletin. The butt-log, some thirty feet long, lies on the ground, and is ascended by a neat stairway of twenty six steps.

LETTER FROM HARRY QUIZMAN TO HIS FATHER.

NUMBER II.

Fastville, Oct. 11, 1858.

Dear Father:—You have rendered me a substantial service in the publication of my letter, for which I must not neglect to thank you. Mrs. Highflier considered herself so greatly complimented by my favorable notice of her, that I have been honored with a polite invitation to occupy a seat in her pew on next Sabbath—which I have accepted.

Mr. Knowall, though not mentioned, yet thought me worthy a place at his table for the effort to eradicate the teaching of foggism from your mind, and to impart in your midst a higher order of "good breeding" and refinement. Yet he complains of my partiality to the opposite sex, and thinks the "gentlemen" entitled to complimentary mention. He urges his own course in proof of the justice of the complaint, and says that he labors as indefatigably in the pursuit of information as the veriest "news gather" that spreads calico or crinoline.

I am forced to admit the validity of the protest, for my own observation justifies the assertion that, the inquisitive phiz of the worthy gentleman is prominent in every crowd, and if he does not find out the subject matter of conversation it is not that he neglects to make diligent enquiry.

That I may not be again accused of favoring the gentle sex, I will here declare that, while there are some of the "lords" that still refuse to make any innovation upon long established custom, and are therefore content to "mind their own business," others are keeping pace with the progressive tendencies of the age, and employ their time in attending to that of their neighbors. A practice worthy of emulation is exhibited in the character of young Mr. Gazer, who devotes his hours of leisure in collecting the odds and ends of all scandal whispered from ear to ear at the corners and by-ways, and with the aid of a little of his own ingenuity, they are soon shaped into a tolerably current article that serves well to raise the price of stock in the slander market.

Mr. Gazer is noted for a commendable peculiarity, which I cannot fail to notice without ignoring my resolve to deal fairly and impartially. His anxiety to increase his stock of retailable commodities induces him to be industriously observant of the internal arrangement of every dwelling whose upraised windows permits the entrance of his curious and scrutinizing glance, and if a lady should be seated at the opening she can but acknowledge her obligations for the interest manifested in her looks and occupation.

Another step towards that perfection to which a portion of this people are fast tending, is the exercise of a generous philantnropy which leads to an exposure of the faults and misfortunes—whether real or imaginary—of their fellows, that society may be protected from imposition and injury. A breath, a whisper against standing or reputation, or a look that meaneth something at the mention of a name, will stir these public benefactors into active life, and society will soon be the wiser for their activity. Idleness in their vocation is not a sin for which they will have to account. The public good demands a swift foot and a quick wagging tongue, and well gifted are they in both.

Slander with its poisonous breath may touch the fair fame of one who holds his all in the good name he bears; these watchful guardians of the public interests are never so derelict to their high calling as to stop to know the truth ere it is sent forth upon the wings of the wind to do its fearful work Malice may hatch from its brain of venom a tale that robs virgin purity of its hallowed sanctity and dispoils it of its beauty and its charms, but tender sympathy never closes the mouth of the trusted sentinels who guard the public morals; if so, the circle of innocence and truth might become contaminated by the presence of the tainted one, though that one be the victim of a perfidious wrong. The accusation is brought; it is theirs to circulate it; and if false, who would dare blame the propagators of the falsehood when actuated by so high and noble a purpose as the general good? If true, the heart must beat in gratitude for the signal service.

I know what you will say to all this; you will denounce it as the prompting of depraved and viscious natures, as the work of the base and evil minded, the subtle instrument of envious dispositions, the paltry excuse for the gratification of a morbid propensity to slander and defame. But let me remind you of the stand point from which you view it, and that the glasses though which you see are obscured by antique notions and musty ideas. Let me, therefore, my Dear Sir, insist that you loosen a little the strings of your prejudice and yield you antipathies to the spirit of the times. It is better you know that a thousand innocent suffer than that one guilty escape; with this in sight, you will see how valuable the means that places in the possession of a community the foibles and misstepings of its members. That you may agree with me, is the continued wish of

Your Dutiful Son,

HARRY QUIZMAN.

THE OCTOBER ELECTIONS.

Elections are to be held this month in the States of Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Iowa, South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Minnesota. The elections will take place on the following days:

Oct 4th. Georgia for local officers; Florida for a member of Congress; Mississippi for a member of Congress to fill the vacancy in Gen. Quitman's district; Iowa for Congressmen and State officers.

Oct. 11th. South Carolina for members of the Legislature. The new Legislature will elect a Governor in place of Gov. Alston.

Oct. 12th. Pennsylvania for State officers and Congressmen; Ohio for State officers and Congressmen; Indiana for Congressmen; Minnesota for a new House of Representatives and nineteen Senators. The next Legislature of Minnesota will have to elect a United States Senator in place of Gen. Shields, whose term expires March, 1859.

Tournament at our State Fair.—We are pleased to announce that the young gentlemen of Raleigh have determined to get up a first class tournament for our ensuing State Fair. Such arrangements have been already made as to render the tournament certain. Full particulars will hereafter be made known.—Standard.

THE DYING HOU

Why ask me now to live?
Why gaze upon me with these
In me there is no cause for tears
I would not from this couch rise—
I would not give
For all the world this dying

Earth's cares and sorrows will past.

What have I had in life?
Have I not vainly hoped and yearned?
Has not each thought in wearin
Back to my heart where burned
Of care and strife?
Has not my youth been wasted
And what is left me now that I

Has not my heart grown
In disappointment's dark,
My eyes grown dim with weeping

[ADVERTISEMENT.]

TO THE PUBLIC.

I see in the Pioneer, of the 21st ult., a card from Geo. W. Brooks, W. H. Clark and D. D. Raper, three of the Directors of the Farmers' Bank, in which are miss-tatements calculated to deceive the public and do gross injustice to me, unless corrected.

I published in the Sentinel of the 18th ult., an advertisement of the "Rates of fare on the Stage from E. City to Norfolk, Va.," in which I stated that Farmers' Bank money, when taken for fare, would be subject to a deduction of 25 per cent. This is the offense which I have given, and which has so suddenly aroused the mighty wrath of these Bank officials.—In this large discount upon their money which I demanded, they saw danger threatened to the rickety institution over which they have the honor to preside, and hence these tears. In their card they state that the Bank has a judgment against me, for the payment of which they threaten me with the sheriff and an immediate sale of my property or that of my security. This is untrue; for they have no such judgment. They do have a judgment against Hathaway & Co., obtained about the time they allege.—But soon after they obtained this judgement, I obtained one for nearly the same amount, against one of the directors of the Bank at that time, which, according to an understanding between the Attorney of the Bank and myself, was to have gone towards the payment of that against Hathaway & Co., and the difference, whatever it might be, I was to pay as soon as it was ascertained and made known to me. This is the reason why it has not been paid long since, and Geo. W. Brooks knows it. I have been willing at any moment to pay the difference between these judgements, as soon as it was made known, and am now ready and willing to do so. It is a little singular that they did not state the amount of the judgement over which they make so much noise; but, I suppose, they would have the public infer that I was one of the two or three favored ones, who have been permitted to monopolize their "shin-plasters" ever since their Bank was established. This is not the case, as I have never been so unfortunate as to be one of its favorites. The only crime which I have committed, against these sensitive Directors, is shaving Farmers' Bank money. But this was enough to kindle the flames of their indignation, and to hurl the thunderbolts of their puny wrath against my devoted head, for (tell it not in Elizabeth City nor in the streets of Greensboro'!) the Directors and stockholders of the Farmers' Bank are shaving their own money, and I proposed to enter the list as a competitor!

Notwithstanding their opposition, I shall continue to shave their bills when opportunites offer. For it would indeed be hard, that I should be compelled to take their money at par, when to get clear of it, I would be forced to subject myself to a shave of ten per cent. and that too, from some avaricious stock-holder of the Farmers' Bank itself. I shall not do it; and if they wish me to act otherwise, they must do something to put their Bank in motion and restore their shattered and ship-wrecked credit.

M. D. HATHAWAY.

NORFOLK CO'Y. FARM FOR SALE.

I OFFER for sale my FARM, known as "FAIRMOUNT," containing 250 Acres, partly cleared, the balance heavily timbered with Oak and Pine. This Farm is situated on the Western Branch of the Elizabeth River, in Norfolk county, distant from Norfolk and Portsmouth 6 miles by water, and five by land, is as healthy as any in Eastern Virginia, and unsurpassed by any Land in this section for producing early Vegetables, &c. It has on it a number of Fruit Trees and Asparagus Beds, and a never failing Spring of excellent Water, within a few yards of the house. The River front is extensive, and particularly valuable for planting Oysters. The Improvements consist of a new Dwelling House, built of the best materials and in modern style, and containing 6 good rooms, with all necessary Barns, Stables, and other Out-houses, which are in good order.

A more minute description is deemed unnecessary, as any one desiring to purchase, would undoubtedly make a personal examination of the property.

It will be sold low, and on accommodating terms. Apply to me at Chuckatuck, Nansemond county, Va., or, Wm. H. H. Hodges, Portsmouth, Va.

Rev. C[illegible] M. D., President.
[illegible] Professors
[illegible] assistants.

THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS SCHOOL [illegible] commence the first Monday in October [illegible] in July following [illegible] at any time. No deduction will be made for late entrance, unless it be six weeks after the commencement of the session. After entering there will be no deduction for absence, except in cases of protracted illness. All students from abroad will board on the College premises, except at the discretion of the Board of Trustees.

EXPENSES.

For a full session, payable one-half at the commencement, the remainder at the expiration of the first half of the session. In the Academic and Collegiate Departments, and in the Special Course, including Ancient Languages and Lectures, - - $50

Optional Course—for which the charges are extra.
Music, (Instrumental,) per session,	$50
Modern Languages, each, per session,	20
Drawing, per session,	20
Oil Painting,	40
Contingent Fund, including use of Piano, school room expenses, &c.,	10
Board, per session, including washing, fuel and lights,	150

Pupils purchase for cash their own books, stationery, sheet music, &c., &c., and pay two dollars each a term for keeping in tune the pianos upon which they practise.

Vocal Music in classes at the charge of the Teacher in that Department.

It will thus be seen that the whole expense for a pupil in the Collegiate or Academic Department, without Music or Optional studies, but including board and all contingencies, is per year, $212.

If expenses in Music Department are added $262.

Ministers of the Gospel are entitled to send their daughters free of tuition in the Collegiate and Academic Departments.

The location is unsurpassed by that of any other College in this country; and for healthiness, will compare favorably with the mountain districts. Last session there were several young ladies in attendance, who came as much for their health, as to pursue their studies; all of whom were in the enjoyment of that great blessing (health) at the close of the School, and will return as soon as it opens.

INFIRMARY FOR SLAVES,
ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.

THE SUBSCRIBER has opened at the Marine Hospital (in a separate building) an INFIRMARY FOR INVALID SLAVES. He has ample accommodations for a limited number, and will give them his careful attention—supplying them with every necessary their case requires. An Institution of this kind offers many advantages to masters having servants afflicted with chronic or surgical diseases. And, from its economy, they are relieved of the expense and annoyance of having such upon a plantation.

The charges for Board, Medical attendance, Nursing, and Medicine, are $6 per week, payable upon the removal of the patient.

In cases requiring a surgical operation, in addition to the above rates, a fee varying from $2 to $30, in different cases, will be charged for the operation, the particulars of which may be ascertained upon application at the Infirmary.

The services of any other regular Physician will be allowed, at the expense of the master.

Persons in the country desiring to send patients to the Infirmary, or obtain information concerning it, may address the subscriber.

☞ No contagious diseases admitted.

BALTIMORE LOCK HOSPITAL.
DOCTOR JOHNSTON,

THE founder of this Celebrated Institution, offers the most certain, speedy, and only effectual remedy in the world for Gleets, Strictures, Seminal weakness, Pains in the Loins, Constitutional Debility, Impotency, Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Affections of the Kidneys, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Disease of the Head, Throat, Nose or Skin, and all those serious and melancholy disorders arising from the destructive habits of Youth, which destroy both body and mind. These secret and solitary practices are more fatal to their victims than the song of the Syrens to the mariners Ulysses, blighting their most brilliant hopes of anticipations, rendering marriage, &c., impossible.

YOUNG MEN

especially, who have become the victims of Solitary Vice, that dreadful and destructive habit, which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of the most exalted talents and brilliant intellects, who might otherwise have entranced listening Senates with the thunders of eloquence, or waked to ecstacy the living lyre, may call with all confidence.

Marriage.

Married persons, or Young Men contemplating marriage, being aware of physical weakness, organic debility, deformities, &c., should immediately consult Dr. Johnston, and be restored to perfect health.

He who places himself under the care of Dr. Johnston, may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and confidently rely upon his skill as a Physician.

Organic Weakness

immediately cured and full vigor restored.

This disease is the penalty most frequently paid by those who have become the victims of improper indulgencies. Young persons are too apt to commit excesses from not being aware of the dreadful consequences that may ensue.—Now, who that understands the subject will pretend to deny that the power of Procreation is lost sooner by those falling into improper habits than by the prudent? Besides being deprived of the pleasure of healthy offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms to both body and mind arise. The system becomes deranged; the physical and mental powers weakened, nervous debility, dyspepsia, palpitation of the heart, indigestion, a wasting of the frame, cough, symptoms of consumption, &c.

Office—No. 7, South Frederick Street, Seven Doors from Baltimore St., East side, up the steps. ☞ Be particular in observing the name and number, or you will mistake the place.

A Cure Warranted, or no Charge Made, in from One to Two Days.

NO MERCURY OR NAUSEOUS DRUGS USED.

DR. JOHNSTON,

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, Graduate from one of the most eminent Colleges of the United States, and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the Hospitals of London, Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere, has effected some of the most astonishing cures that were ever known. Many troubled with ringing in the ears and head when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at sudden sounds, and bashfulness, with frequent blushing, attended, sometimes, with derangement of mind. were cured immediately.

A Certain Disease.

When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds he has imbibed the seeds of this painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-timed sense of shame, or dread of discovery, deters him from applying to those who from education and respectability, can alone befriend him, delaying till the constitutional symptoms of this horrid disease make their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, nocturnal pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head, face and extremities, progressing with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awful disease becomes a horrid object of commiseration, till death puts a period to his dreadful sufferings, by sending him to 'that bourne from whence no traveler returns.' To such therefore Dr. Johnston pledges himself to preserve the most inviolable secrecy, and from his extensive practice in the first Hospitals of Europe and America, he can confidently recommend a safe and speedy cure to the unfortunate victim of this horrid disease.

It is a melancholy fact, that thousands fall victims to this dreadful disease, owing to the unskillfulness of ignorant pretenders, who, by the use of that dreadful poison, mercury, ruin the constitution, and either send the unfortunate sufferer to an untimely grave, or else make the residue of his life miserable.

Take Particular Notice!

Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by improper indulgencies and solitary habits which ruin both body and mind, unfitting them for either Business, Study, Society or Marriage.

These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, viz:—Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Pains in the Head, Dimness of Sight, Loss of Muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions, General Debility, Symptoms of Consumption, &c.

Mentally.—The fearful effects upon the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, Confusion of ideas, Depression of Spirits, Forebodings of Evil, Aversion of Society, Self-Distrust, Love of Solitude, Timidity, etc., are some of the evils produced.

Thousands of persons of all ages can now judge what is the cause of their declining health. Losing their vigor, becoming weak, pale and emaciated, having a singular appearance about the eyes, cough and symptoms of consumption.

Dr. Johnston's Invigorating Remedy for Organic Weakness.

By this great and important remedy, weakness of the organs are speedily cured, and full vigor restored. Thousands of the most nervous and debilitated, who had lost all hope, have been immediately relieved. All Impediments to Marriage, Physical or Mental Disqualification, Nervous Irritability, Tremblings and Weakness, or exhaustion of the most fearful kind, speedily cured by Doctor Johnston.

Young Men,

Who have injured themselves by a Certain Practice, indulged in when alone—a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school—the effects of which are nightly felt, even when asleep, and if not cured renders marriage impossible, and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, and the darling of his parents, should be snatched from all prospects and enjoyments of life, by the consequences of deviating from the path of nature, and indulging in a certain secret habit. Such persons before contemplating should reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote connubial happiness. Indeed, without these, the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage; the prospects hourly darkens to the view; the mind becomes shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection, that the happiness of another becomes blighted with our own.

Office No. 7 South Frederick St. Baltimore, Md.

ALL SURGICAL OPERATIONS PERFORMED.

To Strangers.

The many thousands cured at this institution within the last 16 years, and the numerous important Surgical operations performed by Dr. J. witnessed by the Reporters of the papers and many other persons, notices of which appeared again and again before the public, is a sufficient guarantee that the afflicted will find a skilful and honorable physician.

Dr. JOHNSTON is the only regular Physician advertising to cure private complaints.—His remedies and treatment are entirely unknown to others. Prepared from a life spent in the great hospitals of Europe and the first in this country, viz: England, France, the Blockley of Philadelphia, &c., and a more extensive practice than any other Physician in the world. His many wonderful cures and most important Surgical operations are a sufficient guarantee to the afflicted. Those who wish to be speedily and effectually relieved, should shun the numerous trifling imposters, who only ruin their health, and apply to him.

Take Notice.

☞ There are so many ignorant and worthless Quacks advertising themselves as Physicians, ruining the health of the already afflicted, that Dr. Johnston deems it necessary to say, especially to those unacquainted with his reputation, that his credentials or diplomas always hang in his office.

☞ No letters received unless post-paid, and containing a stamp to use on the reply.

THE Scholastic Term of this Institution will open on the first Monday in October next, and will close the third week in July following. This term is divided into two sessions; the Fall session ending with the last week in February, and the Spring session beginning the ensuing Monday—thus allowing no intermission to intervene.

Hitherto the Male and Female Departments have been entirely distinct, operating under the supervision of two different Principals. The present arrangements propose a more permanent and satisfactory organization, both departments being brought under the immediate charge of the same Principal. The department of Music will be conducted by Miss VIRGINIA WOOD, a teacher of rare attainments, and of great tact and diligence in advancing pupils. Miss EMMA S. GORDON, a diligent and competent Instructress, will teach the English branches and French.

Terms of Tuition per Session, payable one-half in advance.

SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES.

THE UNDERSIGNED WILL OPEN A School for the instruction of Young Ladies in Edenton, N. C., on the first Monday in October, 1858. The first session will end on the 22d of February. The second session will commence on the 23d of February, 1859, and end on the 12th of July.

In the School will be taught, in addition to the ordinary English Branches of Female Education, including the higher branches of mathematical science, the following branches: to wit: Music on the Piano, Drawing, Painting in Water Colors, Silk and French Embroidery, the French and Spanish Languages. Tuition (which must be invariably paid in advance) will be as follows, per session: English $20; French or Spanish $20; Music, $25; Drawing, $6; Painting in Water Colors, [illegible] Silk or French Embroidery, each $5.

No more than Ten scholars will be admitted to each instructress; and should twenty-five pupils offer, another competent instructress will be added. Board can be had in Edenton at cheap rates, and the expenses of tuition in such branches as pupils would ordinarily take, at one time, can only in rare instances of extraordinary advancement, exceed some Fifty Dollars, per session, (music on the piano included) which we consider reasonably low: when the number of scholars to each instructress and the branches to be taught, are considered.

The School will ordinarily open at 9 o'clock A. M., and close at 3 to 3½ P. M., with an interval of about one hour after 12 o'clock.

Neither religious instruction or exercises will be given, or attempted in the School.

ELLEN B. HEATH.
M. ANNA B. HEATH.

Edenton, N. C., July 30, '58.

It will be seen by the above, that my daughters, Misses Ellen B. and M. Anna B. Heath propose to open a school for young ladies in Edenton. Though I have no pecuniary interest in the school, which is wholly that of my daughters, yet I may be permitted to add, that the young ladies who propose to open the school are graduates of St. Joseph's, Emmettsburg, Maryland: that I pledge myself they are in all respects competent to instruct in the proposed branches; and further, that the religious instruction of young ladies committed to their care will not be interfered with. Persons from a distance, desiring to patronize the school, can address the Young Ladies, at Edenton, N. C., to my care.

RANGES, CAMBOOSES, &c., &c

OUR friends and the public generally are informed, that having largely increased our facilities, we are now prepared to supply promptly all articles embraced in our line, on usual terms, (wholesale and retail) at lowest prices to punctual customers. We name in part the justly celebrated New World Cook Stove, than which there is no better Cook Stove in the country—we have also for sale the Delaware Cook, Complete Cook, Enchantress Fanny Forrester, Sunrise, Air-Tight, Morning Star, Globe, Bucks Patent, Pacific, &c.

Our assortment of Parlor, Store, Office and other Stoves is large and desirable.

We also offer to the public the Spiral Hot Air Furnace, which is so constructed as to present a very large radiating surface, without the least construction of draft, thus making it a great fuel saver, as well as an excellent heater.

Purchasers will find it decidedly to their advantage to examine our large and well selected stock before leaving their orders elsewhere.

'YOUNG AMERICA' CORN AND COB MILL,

MANUFACTURED BY
S. MARCH, Norfolk, Va.

THE above Mill, which so far surpassed all others last season, has been improved, and made stronger and better than ever, and is now in the field carrying everything before it. It is the mill for strength, durability and swiftness.

I annex a list of premiums it has received this season, over the 'Little Giant,' 'Magic Mill,' Star Mill, Maynard's Mill, and all others that have come into competition with it:

First premium at the N. York State Fair.
First premium at the Ohio State Fair.
First premium at the Michigan State Fair.
First premium at the N. Carolina State Fair.
First premium at the Nashville (Tenn.) Fair.
First premium at one County Fair in N. York.
First premium at ten County Fairs in Ohio.

Trial of corn and cob mills at the North Carolina State Fair, October 1856.

The following table will show the time occupied by each of the Mills on exhibition in grinding half bushel of corn and cobs:

Young America,	2 minutes and	40	seconds.
Little Giant,	4 "	55	"
Magic Mill,	6 "

Sinclair & Co's Mill, two trials, average time, 6 minutes and 58 seconds.

Advantages of the Young America or Excelsior Mill over all others: 1st, great strength and durability; 2d, simplicity, (having but one set screw to graduate the quality of grinding, which renders it so simple that it may be managed by any ordinary farm hand;) 3d, it will grind more corn, or corn and cob, in the same time, and of same quality, than any other mill in use of the same size; 4th, economy—that part of the mill which is most liable to wear, being separate from the main body of the machine, can be renewed when worn out, at the small cost of $3. Thus in the Young America or Excelsior mill, I present the best, cheapest and most durable mill ever offered to the Farmer. This mill is of large size and greater capacity than any other mill ever sold at the same price.

Price, including extra plates, $50.

I am also manufacturing Cart and Wagon Wheels, Farm Wagons, Carts, Trucks, Drays, Plows, Harrows, Cultivators, Corn Shellers, and Agricultural Implements generally, and am better prepared to furnish farmers and merchants than any other house in the city.

Call and examine my stock and be convinced that it is to your interest to patronize Southern enterprize. I am unwilling to believe that all the men in Virginia and North Carolina prefer to build up the North and impoverish the South.

I have also a Foundry connected with my factory, and solicit orders for Castings generally.

ROSCIUS.

A FOUR YEAR OLD DEVON BULL, BLOOD Red, weighing 1800 pounds, and perfect in form, will stand at the Farm of the subscriber at the low price of Ten Dollars the season. Roscius took the First Premium at the Connecticut State Fair; at the New York State Fair; and at the Late Maryland State Fair. He is the largest animal of the kind ever introduced into this Country, and is of the pure Devon Stock. I would particularly invite all feeling an interest in the improvement of stock to call and see for themselves. For pedigree see the English Herd Book, [illegible] with respect.
